

In the face of disaster, 73% of officials want instant communication to ensure better survival rates

The inability of our public safety officials to readily communicate with one another threatens the public's safety and often results in unnecessary loss of lives and property. 38% of emergency managers say they had experienced communication problems in crisis situations in short-term planning. Survival rate can be greatly increased by breaking this communication bottleneck with Omoco for disaster network response solution.

Because when struck by a catastrophic natural disaster, the efficiency of disaster response operation is critical to life saving.
